

New Jersey Moving and Storage Company teams up with Philadelphia Sports

New Jersey moving and storage company becomes the official mover of the Comcast-Spectator teams including the Philadelphia Flyers.

December 2, 2008 (FPRC) -- Simonik Transportation and Warehousing Group, LLC, a moving and storage company of Mt. Laurel, NJ, has become the "official mover" of three Comcast-Spectator teams, as part of a one-year sponsorship with the Philadelphia-based sports and entertainment company. Terms of the deal were not disclosed.

Simonik Transportation & Warehousing Group will work closely with the Philadelphia 76ers, Flyers and Phantoms in community events and activities, as well as serve the company by providing transportation and warehousing services.

"We are excited and this opportunity and look forward to establishing a long lasting relationship with Comcast-Spectator and their teams," said Robert Kandetzke of Simonik Transportation. "Comcast-Spectator is a tremendous company with an outstanding reputation. We are very fortunate to now be associated with their teams."

"Simonik Transportation is a terrific locally-based company that we are pleased has joined us this season as a sponsor," said Comcast-Spectator President Peter Luuko. "It's great to see companies like Simonik Transportation join us and be associated with our teams."

ABOUT THE COMPANIES
