

Stradalli Announces New Full Carbon Mountain Bike Framesets

Stradalli releases two new full carbon mountain bike framesets that follow in the footsteps of its popular Milano Strada-Pro road bike recently seen in the pro circuit.

Miami, Florida (FPRC) September 14, 2010 -- Stradalli Cycle, the affordable high performance carbon bicycle manufacturer, is pleased to announce the introduction of two new carbon fibre mountain bike framesets. The Geneva and ST-DS 7 are built using the same technology which previously allowed Stradalli to create some of the best full carbon road bike frames in the world.

The Geneva is a hardtail frameset, featuring 3K carbon and a variable cross section for extra rigidity and durability. Derived from the same winning technology as the Milano Strada-Pro the Geneva frame has a tensile strength of 50 tons per square cm thanks to an exterior weave of 3000 weaves per crossing. The result is maximum stiffness where it counts, ensuring superb reliability and precision handling.

The ST-DS 7 is a full carbon, dual suspension frameset. Created from proven designs, and innovative processes, the Stradalli dual suspension bike offers the best of both worlds in unforgiving terrain. The ST-DS 7 ranks up there with the most sophisticated mountain bike frames in the industry. The rear suspension offers 35mm of travel but yet weighs in at only 1600 grams (393mm frame).

“Stradalli has been manufacturing some of the best high-tech full carbon road bike frames in the world,” said Thomas Steinbacher, CEO of the Stradalli Cycle Company. “Now we are bringing the same high-tech and affordable price approach to the mountain bike market.”

Along with these two new framesets, Stradalli are also releasing various mountain bike components including carbon wheels and handlebars.
