October 19, 2011 (FPRC) -- AUSTIN, TX -- Xtreme Xhibits, a company that helps provide customers with San Antonio trade show exhibits, has recently completed a design used by the U.S. military.

The design, which highlights the Army's humanitarian mission in Africa, was one of over 100 different exhibitions on display at the Association of the U.S. Army Annual Meeting in Washington D.C.

Attendees at the event agreed that the exhibit from Xtreme Xhibits and U.S. Army Africa was one of the most unique ones at the meeting.

The work on the exhibit began more than six months ago and the Commanding General of U.S. Army Africa, Maj. Gen. David R. Hogg selected the final design last spring. Once the design was set, Xtreme Xhibits started work on the actual construction, keeping the U.S. Army Africa representatives involved throughout the entire process.

"We're incredibly honored to be asked to create this exhibit for the U.S. Army and even more honored at the reception it received at the Army's meeting in Washington, D.C. We wanted the exhibit to pay tribute to the accomplishments of the Army's newest command -- U.S. Army Africa. The Army is providing valuable humanitarian services to the people of Africa and we're privileged to play a small part in showing off and celebrating their triumphs," said Scott Amerie, owner of Xtreme Xhibits.

Xtreme Xhibits has built trade show displays for a number of other companies, in addition to the U.S. Army's Africa Command. The company does more than just design a San Antonio trade show booth for its clients. Instead, its focus is on understanding each client's objectives before designing an Austin trade show display that fits their needs. Each exhibit is backed by Xtreme Xhibits customer service record, which doesn't end when the exhibit is delivered.

"We're focused on each client as individuals and know that there's no one size fits all trade show solution. Whether you're looking to create a visually impactful exhibit, we can help stop your customers in their aisles and draw them in. We'll work with you to uncover what message you want to convey and then design your exhibit, your giveaways and other collateral around this message. If you're looking for help in ensuring that your brand and your booth convey one clear message, give us a call and let us help. Our team has over 50 years of combined experience with the trade show and events industry and we're sure we can help you make an impact, just as we did with the U.S. Army Africa Command," said Amerie.
