

Rescuecom will Provide Support for Vizio's New Line of Computers

Rescuecom will provide its fast and flawless computer services for the newly announced Vizio computers when they are released on the market later this year.

Syracuse, NY January 27, 2012 (FPRC) -- Rescuecom, a computer support and computer services provider with a long history of professional expertise in all makes and models, will now provide Vizio computer support and repair. In the past, Vizio has dealt exclusively in televisions and tablets. With their reasonable prices and durable quality, Vizio has long been a trustworthy company from whom to buy good products because they rarely require computer support. This year Vizio stepped dramatically out of its comfort zone to begin making desktop and laptop computers, and Rescuecom is ready to provide any necessary computer services during Vizio's transition into a new area of computer manufacturing.

Before purchasing any new electronics, assessing the quality and availability of computer support is an important factor to consider. Rescuecom's professional computer services technicians can remotely solve computer support problems for any model that needs computer services. Adding Vizio computer support to their already expansive repertoire of computer services helps Rescuecom stay a leader in the field of computer support.

As with all of Rescuecom's computer services, computer support technicians will be available 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, 365 days a year to answer any questions and resolve any Vizio computer support problems customers encounter. Regardless of the time of day, Rescuecom can solve your computer support problems whenever you need computer services, fitting your computer services into your schedule.

At the Consumer Electronics Show this January in Las Vegas, Vizio introduced three new laptops and two new all-in-one desktops. The two all-in-one desktop computers come in 24-inch and 27-inch models, with a wireless multitouch trackpad, wireless keyboard, and a subwoofer. The all-in-one computers are no thicker than a normal monitor is because the internal components are all in the base. The thinner two laptops, a 14" and a 15.6", are lightweight, portable, and attractive. The thicker 15.6" laptop has a hard disk drive the others lack, as well as a better video card.

On their website, Vizio says that they are attempting to revolutionize the way people think about their PCs. They want people to look forward to turning on their computer, so they have taken the time to re-imagine what people want out of their computers. By constantly re-imagining computer services, Rescuecom has spent over twenty years providing the same sort of revolutionary computer services to which Vizio is dedicating themselves. It seems that Vizio's headfirst leap into the computer technology battle is going to pay off with this new line of laptops and all-in-one desktops, and Rescuecom will be there with professional computer support when customers need reliable computer services.
