

Dogs Have Angels Too Wins IndieReader Discovery Award for Women's Fiction

Dogs Have Angels Too by Sarah Cavallaro receives IndieReader Discovery Award in the category of Women's Fiction

July 4, 2013 (FPRC) -- The winners of the annual IndieReader Discovery Awards (IRDAs) were announced at BookExpo America (BEA), a major trade show in New York City. The award in the category of WOMEN'S FICTION went to Dogs Have Angels Too by Sarah Cavallaro.

Judges for the awards included publishers, agents, publicists, reviewers, authors, bloggers, and producers. The book was awarded XXXX stars out of five by IndieReader's reviewers.

IndieReader (www.indiereader.com) is known as "the essential consumer guide to self-published books and the people who write them." Its founder, Amy Edelman, came up with the idea of IndieReader "to give book lovers the opportunity to discover great works that they might not have otherwise found".

Dogs Have Angels Too is a heart-warming comedy of errors for all dog lovers of the twenty-first century...In the dog-eat-dog world of New York City, Miss Pink leads a pack of down-on-their-luck women, who ultimately find hope in the most unlikely of places: an over-crowded animal shelter. Miss Pink, a former marketing executive and divorcee who's intermittently homeless herself, makes it her mission to find homes for a growing bevy of cuddly canines. Her "adoption walks" bring her to meet a series of fellow New Yorkers, all of whom are struggling with their own crises. They are all uniquely ripe for recruitment in Miss Pink's master plan- which she's devising on the fly, by the seat of her favorite pink pants!

About the author: Sarah Cavallaro is married to renowned artist Cosimo Cavallaro. She produces all of his art installations. She is the former founder and president of award-winning Emerald Films in New York City and is a published poet whose work has appeared in numerous anthologies. Dogs Have Angels Too is her second novel. To buy this wonderful book about dog rescue or for further information, please visit our website at <http://www.dogshaveangelstoo.com/>.
