

A Dog's Tale Tells A Different Story : Canine Antiques & Collectibles Are Finding New Forever Homes

Is there a bond stronger than that between a human and a dog? One answer to this question is reflected in a timeless collection of dog antiques and collectibles curated for a recently launched online business, A Dog's Tale.

November 18, 2013 (FPRC) -- Is there a bond stronger than that between a human and a dog? One answer to this question is reflected in a timeless collection of dog antiques and collectibles curated for a recently launched online business, A Dog's Tale.

Located at www.adogstalecollectibles.com, owner Donna O'Connor has collected pieces from around the world - and with the same love and passion one has for his or her dog, Donna cares for and preserves each collectible until it is passed on to a new forever home. 'A Dog's Tale is based purely on appeal. We want each piece to be your new favorite, to let it grab at your heart and we want our clients to showcase them with pride', says O'Connor, 'our pieces are in excellent condition, and are meant to be seen and talked about for years to come.'

In addition to offering a well-curated collection of canine-themed antiques and collectibles, A Dog's Tale is proud to offer top-notch customer service with an easily navigable website. The owners are readily available for email and phone consultations, and they look forward to fulfilling interior design wishes for homes and businesses throughout the country and beyond.

For more information about A Dog's Tale, please contact Liz Gorman at liz@barketingpr.com or 832.526.8580, or visit www.adogstalecollectibles.com.

###

Contact Information

For more information contact Liz Gorman of A Dog (<http://adogstalecollectibles.com/>) 8325268580

Keywords

collectible

dog

vintage

You can read this press release online here