FX International Markets announces January 2014 Trade Metrics, Increases Month-Over-Month Volume Figures, Launches New Emerging Hedge Fund Manager Service

February 4, 2014 (New York) -- FX International Markets, one of the world's fastest growing providers of online foreign exchange (FOREX) services, today announced volume figures for the month of January 2014.

During the month, FX International Markets clients traded $38.1 billion in OTC FX. Thus, volume figures jumped 10% over December figures. FX International Markets, the online multi-asset trading, investment banking and asset management specialist, saw good month-over-month growth through its cross-asset API solution for institutional clients. New clients using the FX International Markets API service are fund managers.

FX International Markets provides institutional and professional clients with FX liquidity and an enhanced pricing and execution. FX International Markets approaches the Direct API channel by leveraging the expertise gained over years of managing their own relationship with liquidity providers, and uses these same tools, metrics, and expertise to construct customised feeds to provide reliable high quality liquidity services to FX International Markets clients.

FX International Markets started also a hedge fund manager service for emerging managers. FX International Markets emerging hedge fund managers can establish their fund as a sub-fund of an existing authorized mutual fund with legal segregation of their asset and liabilities from the other sub-funds. This low cost solution allows an emerging hedge fund manager to create and launch a fund with less initial seed capital and without the high costs associated with establishing and managing an independent fund.
