

National EdTech to Represent Impero in North America

Impero Software and National Education Technologies Ink Partnership Deal for North America

October 28, 2014 (FPRC) -- Impero remote monitoring and management software is now available in North America through National Education Technologies.

Impero Software (www.imperosoftware.com) was founded in 2002 and has seen rapid growth across the globe. It offers remote monitoring and management tools for school computer networks, classroom management and student Internet safety. The company's flagship product, Impero Education pro manages more than 4 million computers in 40 different countries. Head Office is in the UK which handles all technical development, support functions and commercial operations and a new office has been recently opened in Portland, Oregon.

The most commonly reported benefit of Impero Education Pro is the time it saves. Allowing Network Managers to respond to issues and fix problems remotely saves valuable hours each day and reduces classroom downtime waiting for IT support.

Teaching staff see a reduction in classroom admin as many activities (issuing tasks, marking exams, logging students on/off etc...) are automated, while the remote control and instant messaging functions allow teachers to respond quickly.

National Education Technologies (www.nationaledtech.com) provides software and consulting services for educational establishments across North America. Founded by partners with decades of industry experience, National EdTech is committed to providing world-class software and services to it's growing customer base.

"Impero allows us to address many client concerns such as classroom management, power savings, print management and child internet safety all in one enterprise solution." states Michael Blanchard, Director of Business Development at National EdTech.
