San Francisco, CA, January 28, 2015 (FPRC) -- Real estate took a major hit in 2007 which spiraled into a global economic meltdown. As a result real estate values dropped to their lowest in decades. This caused many people to lose out, but it also presented an amazing opportunity for a new generation of investors. Phil Pustejovsky used his own experience in the business to make a fortune, and soon began inspiring others to do the same. His website, FreedomMentors.com, is now sharing more secrets than ever in a bid to convince people that their most prosperous future lies in real estate.

In an expansion of his website and YouTube channel, Phil is sharing more free information, insight and inspiration than ever in order to help others achieve the same success he found for himself. The Freedom Mentor website features an apprentice program and a free downloadable book with a host of secrets to get people started on their path to real estate wealth.

What's more, the site provides links to the YouTube channel, wherein Phil personally delivers his insights as well as sharing stories from previous mentees, who all effuse about the success they have experienced as a result of his guidance.

A spokesperson for Freedom Mentors explained, "We are thrilled that Phil has taken the decision to release a host of previously closely guarded secrets for free and open to public consumption, as it makes our website the hottest resource online for anyone thinking of investing in a property. With the market crash, this is the ideal time to cash in on the recovery as real estate prices will increase rapidly during recovery to guarantee profits. Furthermore, Phil's system allows people to identify hot prospects and maximize the return on their investments, and these new secrets will sure get enough people excited to create a new raft of investors."
