

Robert Phinney Joins Sebesta as Sustainability Leader

Sebesta, Inc., a national leader in lifecycle performance for built environments, adds Robert Phinney to the firm as their new Sustainability Service Line Leader.

July 27, 2015 (FPRC) -- St. Paul, MN: Sebesta, which provides building engineering services throughout the U.S., announces the addition of Robert Phinney as Sustainability Service Line Leader. He offices in Sebesta's Arlington, Va. location, from which he serves clients nationwide. Robert is a registered Architect and LEED Fellow with 20 years of professional experience, and is a highly regarded leader in sustainable solutions in the Healthcare, Commercial, Education, Science and Technology, and Government market sectors.

"Robert brings strong expertise to our full range of sustainability services," says Bradley Bowman, Sebesta Vice President and Regional Business Unit Leader. "He will provide subject matter expertise in sustainable strategies and leadership, working with our staff and clients across America."

Phinney now leads Sebesta's robust sustainability solutions for clients. These include technical support for building certification (i.e. LEED facilitation), high performance buildings support, carbon footprint analyses, GHG Inventories, climate action plans, and sustainability master planning.

In keeping with Sebesta's mandate to Deliver Solutions and Improve Lives, Phinney is committed to giving back to his community. Currently, he is an Ambassador for the Living Building Challenge through the International Living Building Institute, and is active in other community-driven environmental organizations such as the DC Living Building Collaborative, the Health Product Declaration Collaborative, and the Market Transformation to Sustainability.
