

Worldwide Finance Launches Forex Analytics Site To Aid Traders In Decision Making

Worldwide-Finance.net is a new website created to help traders, managers, investors and analysts get the best data from the Forex market, to improve their decisions and returns.

Constanta, Romania -- October 27, 2015 (FPRC) -- The world wide forex market, or foreign exchange market, is the largest market in the world, responsible for carrying some of the most valuable assets in the world, it never closes, trading around the clock. As such, no matter where users are in the world, traders can make considerable trades at any time, and the market is much more agile in responding to news that can affect share prices. World Wide Finance is a new website created by trading experts to help people make sense of the latest occurrences and what it can mean for their portfolios.

The new website is designed to be content focused, with a priority on easily accessible and interpretable data published up to the minute by the site's resident team of experts. The site offers news and analysis, a blog covering broader trends in finance and trading, and more, all with emphasis on being current, with a breaking news bar that ensures people get top-line information in a constant stream while browsing.

With Forex, Commodities and Futures news, the website aims to chart how political alliances, economic deals, emerging trends and a multitude of other factors combine to affect the rates affecting everything from national currencies to oil, gold and steel prices throughout the world.

A spokesperson for Worldwide Finance explained, "We are thrilled to be launching this new website with a targeted focus on the forex market, helping people make their biggest wins on some of the world's biggest commodities. Our site is updated around the clock to ensure we never miss a story, and that users around the world can benefit from the knowledge and insight our experts use to comment on stories. We look forward to building a thriving online community here."
