

A-1 Auto Transport Expands Automotive Shipping Services To Include All Terrain Vehicles

A-1 Auto Transport has now included ATVs in the list of automobiles they are capable of transporting, helping those in farming, sports and recreation to get their ATVs delivered.

Aptos, CA -- February 2, 2016 (FPRC) -- Vehicles are an essential part of people's everyday lives, but to get those vehicles distributed around the country without adding thousands upon thousands of miles of wear and tear requires special logistical arrangements. Creating a reliable transport network for vehicles is a difficult task, but A-1 Auto Transport Inc. has spent years establishing the most comprehensive network possible. A-1 is now expanding the level of service they offer and the variety of vehicles they transport, including for the first time ATVs.

ATVs, also known as quad bikes, are used in farming, recreation, sports and the military to allow individuals to quickly access and cross terrain that is not accessible to normal road vehicles. America has approximately ten million ATVs in circulation at any given time, meaning there is a real demand that A-1 is answering.

The company is able to transport ATV from one side of the country to the other or anywhere in between, thanks to their extensive network of over forty terminals and thirty vehicles. The website requires only the pick-up and drop-off points and date to be able to offer a free quote on any national or international shipping task.

A spokesperson for a1autotransport.com explained, "A-1 Auto Transport is thrilled to be able to extend the range of vehicles that we are able to support by ensuring we have the very latest and best vehicle transport trucks available with flexible floor-space fitting the tyre profile of a wider range of vehicles than ever before. ATV numbers are growing year on year and so we understood it was essential to help support this thriving industry with the logistical solutions it requires. These new services are already available to our customers, and we look forward to helping more people than ever with their vehicle logistics needs."
