

Trans Works Transmissions Expands Inventories of Scratch-Rebuilt Wholesale Parts

More top-quality, unbeatably priced wholesale transmissions in stock means more opportunities for commercial clients to save money for their customers, Trans Works Transmissions reports

Portage, Wisconsin -- February 3, 2016 (FPRC) -- Trans Works Transmissions, Columbia County's top transmission service for over three decades, announced an expansion of the company's popular wholesale transmission service. With more than 100 certified, re-manufactured transmissions in stock and ready to ship at any given time, shop owners and independent garages gain a valuable way of serving their own customers better. As a full-service transmission specialist, Trans Works Transmissions offers everything from routine maintenance to repairs, full rebuilds, and the heavy-duty fleet care detailed at <http://www.trannyman.net/fleetheavy-duty/> . With an expanded wholesale transmission inventory, Trans Works Transmissions will become an even more valuable partner to Wisconsin garages and repair services.

"For many automotive repair professionals, having to tell a customer that a transmission needs to be replaced can be difficult," Trans Works Transmissions co-owner Mel Mravik said, "It can be tough to deliver the news that such a major repair is required, but there are good ways of making things easier. Our rebuilt transmissions are every bit as reliable as new ones but are available at far lower prices. We're happy to say that we're now able to keep even more of these wholesale transmissions in stock at all times, something that we think is going to benefit our partners and their customers greatly."

Second in complexity only to the engines whose power they are responsible for channeling, modern vehicle transmissions can be incredibly reliable. Handling hundreds of horsepower over tens of thousands of miles of travel inevitably takes a toll, though, with crucial parts wearing down as they are stressed.

Minor transmission problems can often be remedied with correspondingly minor intervention, as is detailed at <http://www.trannyman.net/repair/> . When that wear develops to a certain point, the replacement or rebuilding of a transmission will typically be called for, however. Alongside major engine repairs, transmission replacements can make for some of the biggest bills vehicle owners will ever face, with a 2015 Angie's List investigation putting the price of many new replacement parts alone at between $4,000 and $8,000.

Another potentially attractive option is to swap in a rebuilt transmission instead. The Trans Works Transmissions wholesale transmission program makes it easy for garage owners to save their clients as much as thousands of dollars while not compromising on reliability or performance. With ASE-Certified technicians employing the best practices promulgated by the Automatic Transmission Rebuilders Association, Trans Works Transmissions consistently delivers guaranteed rebuilt transmissions at the lowest prices available anywhere.

By expanding the company's inventory of wholesale-ready transmissions, Trans Works Transmissions will make it even easier for garages throughout Columbia County and beyond to take advantage of this valuable opportunity. Those interested can learn more about the wholesale transmission program and other Trans Works Transmissions services at the company's website.

About Trans Works Transmissions, LLC:

Family-owned and -operated for over 33 years, Trans Works Transmissions provides the best in ASE-certified transmission maintenance, repair, and rebuilding services to clients throughout the greater Columbia County, Wisconsin, area.

Contact Information

For more information contact Kim & Mel Mravik of Trans Works Transmissions

(<http://www.trannyman.net>)

608-742-5136

Keywords

Trans Works Transmissions

<http://www.trannyman.net/fleetheavy-duty/>

<http://www.trannyman.net/repair/>

You can read this press release online here