Itemcycle Launches Apple Buyback Website

Startup company Itemcycle launches new website for buying used Apple devices. The website aggregates prices from top buyback companies to calculate higher offers for visitors' devices.

OHIO - May 14, 2016 - Startup company Itemcycle launches new website for buying used Apple devices. The website aggregates prices from top buyback companies to calculate higher offers for visitors' devices.

Itemcycle aims to make it easy to sell your iPhone, iPad, MacBook, or other Apple device. Visitors receive an offer by choosing their device, its specs, and selecting the device's condition from four choices: Perfect, Good, Poor, or Dead. Once an offer is accepted, a free pre-paid shipping label is provided for shipping the device. After the shipment is received and the contents is verified, payment is sent via PayPal or bank check. Visitors also have the option to donate their device's value to a charity of their choice, including some local charities. Devices that can't be salvaged are recycled responsibly.

"Itemcycle does a fantastic job offering competitive prices for Apple devices," says Eric Ditmer, owner of Itemcycle. "I get lots of happy emails from customers telling me how much extra money they made using our website. Itemcycle is changing the way buyback companies purchase devices."

Itemcycle has launched and is now available in the continental United States. The company plans on expanding to other countries in the upcoming months. Please visit http://www.itemcycle.com to read more about Itemcycle and to sell your Apple device.
