"We refer to these packages as a business in a box, as we understand that time is limited for business owners. They have other, more important tasks to concentrate on, such as customer service. With our help, their website is never an issue. We take care of everything that is needed to ensure the company gets noticed and brings in more traffic, while the business owner handles those tasks only he or she is capable of addressing," Gary Sweeney, spokesperson for Blue Whale Media Ltd, explains.

Three brochure style website packages are currently being offered, along with three online shop packages. In addition, clients find they can select from a wide variety of add-ons, such as social media assistance or PPC marketing. Some companies need more and others need less. The goal needs to be to allow the client to determine their priorities and proceed from there.

"All too often companies offer a one-size-fits-all plan, and clients either don't obtain all that they need or they pay for items they don't want. With the range of packages we offer, we work to eliminate this problem. This doesn't mean, however, that clients are on their own for tasks not included in the package. Blue Whale Media Ltd. offers a variety of other services to best meet the needs of our clients," Sweeney continues, "and this includes website content writing, blogging, website branding and more.

Experts estimate 50 percent of the world's population is now connected to the internet. Every business needs to ensure these potential clients can find them when looking for a product or service. The website plays a large role in whether or not this objective is received, and website design and development is only the first step of this process. There are numerous others companies need to take to ensure they obtain the brand visibility they desire and the leads they need to succeed.
