ReviewingThis has created an in-depth review of ScentBird, which helps people access a new perfume every month through a novel subscription service. New York City, NY, United States - March 13, 2017 /MarketersMedia/ -- Perfume is something every woman loves to have at her disposal, and many choose to wear it every day. Most women will stick to one perfume for most of their lives, as the bottles can last months or even years, and represent an expensive investment to get wrong should they choose a scent they do not like. ScentBird is a new monthly subscription service encouraging women to become more playful with their perfume, by offering the ability to get a new perfume sample mailed out every month. ReviewingThis has just published a comprehensive review of the service.

ReviewingThis explains the whole process step by step, from signing up for an account and create a rolling monthly subscription, to receiving a new perfume sample every month through the post. Individuals can select a specific sample they would like to receive, or get the 'sample of the month' as selected by ScentBird's expert perfumers.

The review helps people understand what to expect from the package. They describe the website as a marvel for those who want to indulge in scents and learn more about how they are created. It has scent profiles for every perfume allowing people to understand the base notes, mid tones and highlights of each perfume. The subscription is simple, affordable, and opens up a whole new world to users.

A spokesperson for ReviewingThis explained, "ScentBird helps women become bolder in their perfume choices. We understand that one scent does not suit for every occasion, and that this service helps give women the freedom to explore several different samples over time, discovering new scents while learning more about their preferences. After our experience, we are happy to recommend the service, which is simple and easy to use while being highly rewarding, from the initial interactions and scent selection to the delivery and application. We hope this helps more women become more adventurous with scents."
