CHICAGO - March 14, 2017 /MarketMedia/ -- Bruno's Tuckpointing announced new updates to the company's online portfolio of recent projects. As one of Chicagoland's top brick and masonry specialists for nearly 35 years, Bruno's Tuckpointing works with residents, businesses, and industrial and institutional clients to clean, maintain, repair, and restore the many beautiful brick and stone structures in the area. New updates at the Bruno's Tuckpointing website include pictures of many of the company's recent projects, making it easy for visitors to see the difference that top-quality tuckpointing and repair work can make. Visitors to the Bruno's Tuckpointing website can also read about the company's complete range of services and schedule a free consultation.

"When I founded this company over 30 years ago, I was determined to deliver the highest possible quality of service to each and every client," said Bruno's Tuckpointing founder and CEO Mike Bruno, "We've stuck to that mission ever since, and that commitment has been an important reason for our success. The years since have seen us working on everything from some of the state's most significant brick and masonry landmarks to projects of all sizes for residential, commercial, and industrial clients. We think the new updates to our online portfolio of recent projects will do a great job of showing site visitors what we're about."

Chicago, today the third most populous city in the United States, has long been identified with buildings made from brick or masonry. In the booming years between 1870 and 1880 alone, according to the United States Census Bureau report from that period, Chicago's local brick manufacturing industry tripled in terms of the number of active businesses, with total wages paid more than doubling. The 17-story Monadnock Building put up a little over a decade later remains the world's tallest building with load-bearing brick walls and is one of thousands of such structures in the Chicagoland area that contribute to its special, distinctive character.

Since 1983, Bruno's Tuckpointing has been one of the region's most active and successful providers of a full range of brick and masonry cleaning, maintenance, repair, and restoration services. As a family-owned business, Bruno's Tuckpointing consistently delivers personal, engaged service on jobs of all sizes, while also offering all the resources and capabilities of a large company.

New updates at the Bruno's Tuckpointing website include pictures and descriptions of many of the company's recent projects. From repair work on homes and chimneys to tuckpointing on high rises, the new updates will be of interest to many. Visitors to the Bruno's Tuckpointing website can also easily arrange a free consultation regarding any repair, restoration, or tuckpointing Chicago brick or masonry might require.

About Bruno's Tuckpointing:
