A new plumbing report has been launched by Newcastle plumber Hunter Eco Plumbing, which advises people to get in touch with experts if they think they've got a blocked drain or need emergency work done on their toilets, sink and baths. It also explains that if someone notices that their toilet, sinks or baths and drains are backing up, bubbling or making gurgling noises, there can be a simple solution.

Something that people may least expect is that a tree in the yard or the neighbours garden can be searching for water and causing problems. Tree roots are the most common cause of drain blockages, because tree roots strangle pipes to try to squeeze water from them.

This can cause catastrophic damage to the sewer and stormwater lines, so it is of utmost importance to contact experts when people think this could be a potential issue, because the quicker they can act, the better.

Hunter Eco Plumbing in Newcastle and Lake Macquarie prides itself on its high levels of customer service. As part of this commitment, they strive to be at their customers' doors as fast as possible, so that even in the case of emergencies, they can be there to help when they're needed.

The company specialises in environmentally friendly plumbing solutions for all areas of Newcastle, Lake Macquarie and the Hunter Valley, with expert plumbers who can help with all manner of problems.

This means that whether people have a leaking tap or need full renovation work carried out in their bathroom, they can get in touch with Hunter Eco Plumbing to get the job done.

A full list of services provided by the company is listed on the website, and includes drain cleaning, high pressure sewer jetting, which is ideal for cleaning blocked pipes and drains, and burst pipe repair. They also offer sewer line repairs and bathroom renovations.

Interested parties can find out more on the URL above, where they can also get in touch using the contact details provided.
