New features will help keep site visitors up to date with latest developments at top web development firm and in field of technology, Staxoweb reports LONDON - March 15, 2017 /MarketersMedia/ -- Staxoweb, one of the United Kingdom's leading full-service Web Development agencies, announced a new blogging initiative, along with a new online portfolio feature. To launch in the coming weeks, the new blog will keep readers up to date with the latest developments concerning Staxoweb, its employees, and the wider world of technology. The new Staxoweb portfolio will feature the final results from many of the company's most ambitious and challenging projects, providing visitors with an up-close look at what an industry-leading Web Development company can accomplish.

Offering a full range of services that covers every web development, e-commerce, and hosting need, Staxoweb specializes in delivering solutions that match the unique requirements of each client. With the new blog and digital portfolio both to launch soon, visitors to the Staxoweb website can learn more about the company and its services now.

"We're always looking for ways to help others understand what we have to offer and how different technologies might serve their own business goals," said Staxoweb CEO Sean Kelly, "We've therefore set off on a brand-new blogging initiative that is going to make it easier than ever before to learn about what we're up to and where the fast-evolving world of technology is headed. We're also now putting the final touches on a new portfolio section that will show at a glance what we're capable of. Every one of us here at Staxoweb is passionate about producing business-enhancing results for our clients, and we think the new blog and portfolio are going to communicate that clearly."

Tens of thousands of professionals now work in the fields of web design and development in the United Kingdom, according to estimates collected by the UK Web Design Association and the Statista online statistics portal. With so many choices before them, though, some businesses and other organizations that need web development help succumb to confusion or paralysis.

Staxoweb was founded in 2010 to provide simpler, more effective web solutions. Highly experienced with a huge range of top technologies like WordPress, Ruby on Rails, Magento, Amazon Web Services, and others, the company's designers and developers work closely with each client to produce the solution that will suit their needs the best.

From simple, static, highly cost-effective websites to e-commerce destinations and customized apps ready to handle high levels of traffic, Staxoweb consistently helps clients get to market faster while saving them money in the process. As a result, the agency has grown quickly since its 2010 founding to forge a reputation as one of the United Kingdom's most capable and effective of its kind. The new Staxoweb blog and portfolio will help website visitors learn about the company and the latest related developments. With both new features scheduled to launch soon, website visitors are also invited to make contact regarding their own web development needs.
