Patch Up Products, which offers a high quality all encompassing Patch-Up Emergency First Aid Kit, has launched a new first aid guide for use with the first aid kit. The Guide offers valuable information in treating common emergencies for people who are adventuring outdoors, interested in survival or disaster preparedness, or simply want to be prepared for accidents that can happen around the home. The Family Guide For First Aid shows how simple techniques can help save lives.

The First Aid Guide is designed to help families be prepared if they ever need to help someone in need, whether it's a commonly occurring injury or an emergency. Using the Guide, people can act confidently and competently when crisis strikes.

Divided into categories based on different types of incidents and accidents that might occur, the guide explains that for general emergencies, people should first and foremost make sure that they don't put themselves in harm's way. In addition to this, while helping someone in need, they should make sure they don't try to fix dangerous issues like gas or chemical leaks.

Other tips include asking permission to help when the victim is conscious, looking for bystanders who might be able to help, and assessing the situation to determine what needs to be done first.

When it comes to burns, people should rinse burns and chemical burn injuries with clean tepid water, not apply butter or oily substances, and wrap the area lightly with non adherent gauze pads.

Tips are also provided for what to do if someone has taken poison, what to do when someone has a fracture, and how to deal with sprains and strains, as well as knocked out teeth, frost bite, choking, shock, stroke, heart attack and fainting.

The Patch Up First Aid Kit can help with the above situations, and has been designed to help families protect their loved ones. It is designed to be compact, water and stain resistant, and easy to transport in a tough well-organize nylon bag with expandable see through compartments for easy item identification.

The kit comes with a full money back guarantee, so customers who aren't happy with their purchase can rest safe assured they will be looked after.

The Patch-Up First Aid Kit is available on Amazon.
