Long office hours have a negative impact on one's lower back, mainly due incorrect posture. Unsurprisingly, people have reported increasingly more and lower back problems over the past few decades, as sedentarism becomes a prevalent issue; more than 31 million Americans experience coccyx pain at any given time, with the condition being among the top causes of missed work.

Most back problems stem from incorrect desk posture. Many people often have postures that curve their spines at unhealthy angles, which significantly increases their chances of developing sacrum pain back problems.

Furthermore, with more and more people spending long hours driving or flying, back pain and similar problems tend to aggravate. Surveys show that after a typical flight, more than half of passengers experience both neck and back pain, with only 12% claiming that they do not experience any type of pain.

Liliyo launched a new seat cushion designed to promote improved posture and relieve lower back pain that is developing a large number of happy satisfied users experiencing relief from a variety of back pain.

Unlike most similar cushions that tend to be either too rigid or too malleable, the Liliyo cushion is made of high-density rebound foam which adapts to the form of the user's lower back while also being firm enough to promote correct posture. Due to its universal size, the cushion can be adapted to a variety of situations, such as office use, desk chair sitting, driving, wheelchair use, flights and others.

Each coccyx cushion comes with a free portable carrying tote bag and extra covers in two colors, velour gray and black.

To increase customer satisfaction, all Liliyo purchases are covered by a 1-year money-back guarantee, applicable even if both covers are used.

The company also announced a future profit-sharing campaign by which 10% of the profits will be donated to a charity.
