

OCD Home Reports On Hidden Dirt In The Home

Certain areas in the home may appear to be clean, yet truly aren't, and this can lead to health issues and other problems for the occupants, OCDHome.com announces

Certain areas in the home may appear to be clean, yet truly aren't, and this can lead to health issues and other problems for the occupants, OCDHome.com announces Mission Viejo, CA - March 20, 2017 /MarketersMedia/ -- Carpets may appear to be clean after vacuuming, yet they actually contain a great deal of hidden dirt and grime. In fact, a carpet is capable of holding as much as eight times its weight in grime, making it dirtier than the typical street in a city. Clean areas such as this with the help of a professional home cleaning company, such as OCD Home (<https://ocdhome.com/>).

"A home is meant to be a safe haven for its occupants. Sadly, many homes have areas that are extremely dirty, yet the occupants aren't aware of these hidden dangers. For this reason, deep cleaning the home is essential, but many families lack the time to take on these tasks. Whether it is the carpets that need to be cleaned or the grout, we'll be happy to complete the job so you don't have to," Jordan Waterman, spokesperson for OCDHome (ocdhome.com), announces.

The Humane Society estimates 65 million homes in the United States now have a pet. When an animal is present in the home, accidents will happen, and cleaning up after these accidents can be difficult. The area must be cleaned, deodorized and sanitized during the process, regardless of whether the accident occurred on a carpet, tile or upholstery in the home. Only when the job is done right can the home be restored to its previous fresh condition.

"OCD Home makes use of the deepest, green-certified, steam cleaning process that offers the fastest drying time. Pets can't always control their accidents, but this doesn't mean the owners need to suffer. We come in, assess the situation and offer solutions to rectify the problems being experienced, so the pet and his or her owner can live comfortably in the residence once again," Waterman states.

Stone surfaces show wear and deterioration over time, and this can affect the entire appearance of the room in which they are found. Stone polishing can help to fix this problem, as it returns the stone surface to its natural appearance. The polishing process helps to remove scratches and other blemishes, while restoring the shine of the stone.

"We are ready to assist with pet stain and odor removal, stone polishing, hardwood floor and upholstery cleaning and more. Our goal is to be the company you call when you need household and/or commercial cleaning tasks carried out. Give us a call today to see how we can be of help to you," Waterman declares.
