Empire Capital Partners has a unique investment philosophy that informs how they deliver for clients, give back to local communities and global initiatives, and secure the future. New York, United States - March 20, 2017 /MarketersMedia/ -- Investment has had its reputation tarnished in the last decade, thanks to reckless schemes that have tanked the global economy. But accumulating wealth through compound interest is actually the most effective and accessible way for ordinary people to begin lifting themselves into real wealth, and it is possible for this practice to sit harmoniously with a moral code. Empire Capital Partners do exactly that, with a forward-thinking philosophy that helps their clients feel good about making investments through their distinct but complementary investment groups.

The company aims to lead the field with a next generation investment philosophy, which prioritizes clients' needs and outcomes by driving toward them with exceptional ideas. At the same time, rigorous research and authentication ensures investments are helping companies that do the right thing, while Empire Capital Partners themselves are always giving back to communities around the world. This is all part of creating sustainable, strategic goals for the client's future prosperity.

With volunteering and matched donation schemes, unprecedented ethics vetting for potential investments, and complete commitment to outstanding investor relations, they are opening up a new way of doing business that can rehabilitate the image of investing, and open it up to new audiences. A spokesperson for Empire Capital Partners explained, "The definition of idiocy, as Einstein once told us, is doing the same thing over and over again expecting a different result. We must learn from the mistakes of the past, and when looking at a strategy to avoid the worst excesses of the financial industry of times gone by, a strict ethical code was the optimal methodology by which to avoid all of those pitfalls. That is why we are fully committed to this practice, and why we are confident it will lead to the best possible long term returns for our clients."

About Empire Capital Partners: Empire Capital Partners has four distinct but complementary investment groups, and is a market leader based on assets under management and investment performance, currently valued at more than $1.13 billion. They offer clients the chance to profit from their first-class in-house research, the company's solid approach to investing, and its next generation investment philosophy.
