

Educational Blog Announced by The Online Test Centre

A new blog is announced that will cover various topics weekly taking on a new angle on how to teach new things to people in a more effective but fun way.

March 24, 2017 (FPRC) --

Education needs to be fun and enter the 21st century

When you hear the word education, what do you think? Useful, valuable, helpful might be some of the words you think of. But just as well can words like time-consuming, boring, not fun etc.

Should education be fun?

“I believe education should be fun, entertaining and motivational all at the same time” says Frank Richards from The Online Test Centre. He continues to say “We all learn most effectively when we are entertained and learning is presented in a fun and motivational way as this engages us and engagement is the key. Engaging your brain means that you will want to learn and feel happy because you are learning new things which in turn means that you remember and understand what you learnt.”

Can education be fun. Yes, it can but for a long time teaching and learning has been stuck with old methods and routines. In today’s world where people spend more and more time online, teaching should also be online and be done in a way that makes us want to read and learn.

Blogs are an interesting addition here. The Online Test Centre launched recently their blog covering various topics like compound interest formulas, simple interest, aptitude tests and all kinds of other mathematical and verbal tests. The idea is to cover a new topic every week in a fun, modern and engaging way.

“Education can be fun but we as education providers have to make it fun, that is the key” says Frank Richards.

Contact Information

For more information contact Frank Richards of The Online Test Centre
(<http://www.theonlinetestcentre.com>)
+447883546779

Keywords

blog

You can read this press release online here