

Organic Healthcare Launching New Bio-Organic Products

Organic Healthcare is set to launch new health products

March 24, 2017 (FPRC) -- Organic Healthcare, an emerging manufacturer of organic health products, is set to announce new releases. The company has said that it's in the final stage of packaging the first batch of at least two new products ready for the market. This is an interesting move given that the last ever product release by the company was recorded back in August 2016. At this time, the company has a portfolio of 4 products, including the Anti Nail Fungus, the Aragan Oil, and the Jerusalem Balsam Spray.

Organic Healthcare is a Thermalabs sub-brand that was created in early 2016. The company manufactures 100% bio-organic formulations from its factory in Galilee, Israel. Priscilla Rodgers, the brand manager in charge of Organic Healthcare, has said that the company relies on naturally occurring herbs, seeds, and plants acquired from the mountains of Galilee in Israel. The firm has an interesting perspective on healthcare. Rather than relying on modern research and production equipment like most other firms in the space are doing. Organics Healthcare counts on over 1000 years of ancient healthcare knowledge. The company's formulations are created from the works of the Rambam, a historic Jewish scholar, and physician who lived more than 1000 years ago. By so doing, the company is trying to achieve the same good health, physical stamina, and vitality that human ancestors had. Organic Healthcare's products are handmade by a team of professional artisans at the company's main factory in Israel.

Of the three products that Organic Healthcare has launched thus far, Anti Nail Fungus is the most popular. This is a cream-based product that's created to naturally eradicate nail fungus. The product has healing properties for the skin around the nails areas and contributes to healthier nails. Aragan Oil and Jerusalem Balsam are highly organic healthcare products that have multiple benefits not only for the skin but the body.

The move to launch new products will help Organic Healthcare's plan to create an entirely new niche for itself. Although it's not clear what precise product the firm is planning to launch anytime from now, company insiders have hinted at an all-purpose healthy skin formulations and an anti-aging product.

"Organic Healthcare is ready to roll again. It's been nearly one year since we introduced our last product back in August of 2016. But that's about to change. Our company has at least two new products ready to hit the market any time from now. Our professional artisans have been working extra hard over the last few months, and it's now time to show our consumers what we got for them. These new launches will add to our Anti Nail Fungus, Jerusalem Balsam, and Aragan Oil products that we already have in the market..." said Ms. Rodgers.
