April 14, 2017 /MM-prReach/ -- Wallace Pierce, a North Carolina personal injury law firm, has launched a newly designed website at WallacePierce.com along with many new tools to help service their clientele. The firm has created a Statute of Limitations calculator to their website to aid in personal injury claims.

The free tool offers three different options for calculating your Statute of Limitations in North Carolina. There is a Personal Injury Calculator, a Minor Child Case Calculator, and a Wrongful Death Calculator. Each tool is free to use <http://www.prreach.com/north-carolina-statute-of-limitations-calculator/> or anyone who visits the site. Each tool helps the user to determine the window of time one has in order to present their claim for damages before the expiration of the Statute of Limitations.

Litigation Attorney, Jared Pierce notes that, "people often fail to file their claim with enough time to ensure that their rights are protected or do not understand that the statute of limitations acts as an absolute deadline to a personal injury case. Moreover, some people don't understand that they have rights to seek adequate compensation after an accident. As such, it is very important to know and understand how much time the law allows for you to seek the compensation you may deserve." He goes on to note, "Wallace Pierce Law Firm is proud to announce the release of these free tools that will help North Carolinians take that first step towards protecting their rights after a motor vehicle accident."

The tools are part of a larger website update that offers improved usability and a library of useful articles and information around accidents, compensation, and the claims process. Moreover, WallacePierce.com has opened access to an active "Ask a Lawyer" legal forum to the public.

Wallace Pierce is a unique personal injury law firm that focuses on client education, service, and accessibility to your lawyer. Each of their clients are given their lawyer's direct phone number and personal email address, with a belief that after a car accident no one should have to worry about reaching their attorney.
