State gaming legislation has seen some major developments over the past year, and iGaming regulation in particular has been dominating the headlines, especially in Nevada, Delaware, New Jersey and California. WASHINGTON, DC - April 15, 2017 /MarketersMedia/ -- Last week, Ifrah PLLC, a leading U.S. Internet gaming law firm, launched the blog IfrahOniGaming.com. The new blog houses three years of content on US legal developments related to poker, sports-betting, mobile gaming, sweepstakes and lottery, casino gaming and fantasy sports. Thanks to the current updates and articles, all written by legal experts that specialize in the respective field, the blog constitutes the definitive legal news source for U.S. iGaming. Not only does Ifrah's new blog offer insightful analysis on recent iGaming news, but readers will also be able to find up-to-date gaming regulatory information.

"Rapid changes in federal enforcement and state laws have ushered in the United State's newest industry - Internet gaming," said Jeff Ifrah, founder of Ifrah PLLC and noted iGaming attorney. "IfrahOniGaming will serve as the go-to source of current and historical news and analysis on this burgeoning industry as state-by-state ratification drives growth and opportunity for so many US and international companies. "

State gaming legislation has seen some major developments over the past year, and iGaming regulation in particular has been dominating the headlines, especially in Nevada, Delaware, New Jersey and California. Ifrah's iGaming blog will continue to be a useful resource for anyone looking to stay in-the-know on industry regulatory issues. Organized in six categories, the website offers a clear and attractive layout that leads readers to up-to-date articles on topics such as court decisions regarding pokers rules or the current development of casinos in Atlantic City. "This new blog's innovative design borrows from the internet and land-based gaming industry with its bright colors, slot-resembling layout and animated category logos - visual delights any casino-goer will appreciate," said Jeff Ifrah.

Another resource being released simultaneously with the new blog's launch is the latest white paper from Ifrah Law titled, "The Definitive Guide to iGaming in the U.S." Several weeks ago, an exclusive first-look of the guide was distributed at the Global iGaming and Summit Expo (GiGse) in San Francisco, one of the most important conferences on iGaming in the United States that was co-sponsored by Ifrah Law. Since then, the guide has been updated with additional in-depth analysis, state-by-state comparisons and future trend predictions for the iGaming world. The blog can be found at www.ifrahonigaming.com, along with the white paper.

Jeff Ifrah and his team have an international reputation as experts in the iGaming field. Clients and key players in the online gaming industry appreciate their high level of professionalism and their dedication to always stay on top of their game in keeping up with the continuous changes of rules and laws that regulate iGaming within the United States and on an international level. Ifrah is an expert in defending online operators in class action lawsuits and has represented many major iGaming companies, including online poker sites PokerStars and Full Tilt Poker, as well as the Interactive Gaming Council, a non-profit organization that represents iGaming companies across countries all over the globe.
