Foreclosure is a problem for both the individual homeowner and the community where it occurs. As with most financial issues involving home financing and mortgages it often requires understanding complex legal regulations, constantly-updated financing rules and a variety of specific procedures.

The HAMP (Making Homes Affordable Program) contributed to making fiscal regulation and bank mortgage guidelines more manageable for the average homeowner seeking to save their home or modify their mortgages. The program created a series of federal bank guidelines designed to make it easier for homeowners to readjust their mortgage and prevent or resolve foreclosure.

Unfortunately, the HAMP program has been repealed, thus allowing banks to decide on their own mortgages and financing arrangements making it increasingly difficult for the average homeowner to know how to readjust or modify financing and tax payments.

Given the new lack of guidelines, professional bankruptcy consultation has become imperative for the successful management of mortgages and for avoiding foreclosure.

The Law Offices of Neil Crane, LLC, announced an extensive update of its services to help Connecticut homeowners successfully manage their property tax and mortgage issues.

The law firm offers extensive bankruptcy foreclosure mediation services for homeowners looking to re-negotiate their mortgages preventing home loss to foreclosure. As the largest provider of Chapter 13 services in Connecticut, the legal firm provides bankruptcy relief through Chapter 13 repayment plans, thus helping homeowners avoid foreclosure and readjust their financing terms.

The law firm offers a variety of tax relief services with a wide range of legal procedures, including offer-in-compromise, installment agreements, bankruptcy protection, penalty abatements and audits.

Law Offices of Neil Crane, LLC, also offers a variety of debt relief services for unsecured credit card debt and other forms of debt problems.
