According to recent surveys, more than 100 million people are missing one or more teeth. Missing a tooth can have many negative impacts on a variety of factors, from general dental appearance to proper eating and nutrition.

Many people choose to have dental implants to replace their missing and damaged teeth. Working with a professional and experienced dentist is essential for patient success, as the risks associated with improper implants and other cosmetic dental procedures can be severe and costly.

Dr. Arnold has received operative honors from Loyola University and specializes in replacing broken and missing teeth or failing dentures with dental implants.
