Long time photographer launches new blog FujiUser.com to showcase work and life

Vienna, Austria - April 19, 2017 /MarketersMedia/ -- Today, there are more pictures taken every two minutes than what were taken during the entire period of the 1800s. The total number of photos captured on a day to day basis is steadily increasing due to the accessibility of camera phones and digital cameras. As a photographer and traveler, Dominik Krawczyk has decided to create a new blog, found at Fujiuser.com, to showcase the amazing places he visits and photos he captures. However, this isn't just another photographer's blog. This blog focuses on Fuji cameras and the journey Krawczyk has had with them.

"Photography is a unique type of art, while you can capture something everyone has seen and present it to others in a new and exciting way. I created this blog to share my stories about Fuji cameras and the journeys I have had," Krawczyk stated.

While visitors to Krawczyk's photography blog are going to find a number of personal stories and experiences, there are also informative and educational blogs focused on Fuji cameras, their accessories and how to use them. Those new to the world of photography and even experts can find helpful information highlighted here.

The new blog was designed with user friendliness in mind. Navigation is clear, easy to understand and makes it easy for visitors to get from one topic to another. The information flows well and the design of the entire site is focused on photography images Krawczyk has captured in the past. Visitors can immerse themselves in the places he has been and the stories that unfold on the pages of the site.

"I purchased my first camera when I was 15 at a market in Warsaw, Poland. Learning about lenses, lighting and angles came slowly at first. However, with the impressive range of products offered by Fuji I was able to quickly grasp what needed to be done. I haven't stopped shooting since then and love every second of it. I just want to share what I have learned and my passion with others. I think the Fujiuser platform provides me with the perfect opportunity to do just that," Krawczyk continued.

Regardless of how passionate a person is about photography, they can find something interesting to read on this all new, recently launched blog. Krawczyk is dedicated to regularly posting new stories and photos to keep visitors updated on what is going on in his life.
