Stuttgart, Baden-Württemberg - April 19, 2017 /MarketersMedia/ -- As technological advancements continue to bring about new opportunities, business are increasingly using these developments to their advantage. In line with this trend, businesses are veering away from physical data rooms in favor of their up-and-coming virtual alternatives. Industry analysts are reporting an annual surge in demand for virtual data rooms of between 13 and 16 percent with this uptick expected to hold steady through decade's end. In an effort to help meet the growing call, Matthias Böhmichen has launched dataroom24.

Said Böhmichen, "Virtual data rooms offer a number of benefits over their physical counterparts without question. From the beginning, our mission has been to create an option that stands apart from the rest. In developing dataroom24, we incorporated all the best features of the existing options while also addressing issues our competitors have overlooked. The result is a state-of-the-art system that can be booked online and is designed to simplify our clients' work while holding up to even the most demanding applications."

Among the features offered by dataroom24 is around-the-clock online access from any location. Administrators are able to delegate access permission to appropriate personnel with tiered access available if needed. Designed with ease-of-use in mind, the system is said to require minimal setup and training. Based on information from dataroom24.com, multiple layers of security measures have been implemented in order to protect against both internal and external security breaches.

The system is set up to support various file formats and data volumes. Data rooms may be customized based on client need and cover document storage, project management, due diligence, mergers and acquisitions as well as other applications. Services are scalable with available packages covering single, five and unlimited user licensing. Further details can be found on the dataroom24 website.

"The functionality and user-friendliness of our data room has been certified by the Fraunhofer Institute for Industrial Engineering," Böhmichen affirmed. "We offer ultimate security and versatility as well as speed, efficiency and convenience. Those benefits alone give our clients a sizable competitive edge. Virtual data rooms are known to help cut costs as well as boost productivity, and our system is ready to use from the moment clients sign up. We encourage anyone in need of our services to sign up for our free trial, so they can experience the dataroom24 difference for themselves."
