Online marketing has seen a tremendous growth in recent years, with more and more businesses looking for powerful ways to leverage the immense marketing potential of the internet. As more than 90% of all consumers use online reviews and Google searches to find products and services, online visibility has become essential to overall business success.

One of the crucial differences between digital and traditional marketing is that online marketing strategies rely heavily on multimedia content. Video has been shown to have engagement rates up to 12 times higher than text and pictures combined, making it a useful tool for any local business looking to improve its online visibility.

LocalBuzzConnectTV is the new marketing department of Web Marketingville, a leading Cincinnati digital marketing agency. By implementing the latest video marketing strategies, LocalBuzzConnectTV aims to help local businesses showcase the quality of their services and their client satisfaction through professionally-produced video commercials.

The video marketing department of Web Marketingville works with professional spokespersons, scriptwriters, graphic editors and video producers to offer client interaction video marketing services. This type of video is the latest addition to the company's large catalog of video marketing services, featuring a 5-star business review which highlights the benefits of working with the client company.

Ken Geers, the founder of Web Marketingville, said the main benefit of the new type of video commercial is consolidating the client's business authority: "Online client interaction video brings your local business personality to life. It gives our clients a sense of authority that cannot be achieved in the written word."
