

Organic Healthcare to Introduce More Organic Health Products

Organic Healthcare is preparing to launch more health products

April 26, 2017 (FPRC) -- Organic Healthcare, a firm that creates 100% bio-organic health products based on over 1000 years of ancient health wisdom, has announced that it's preparing to launch new products. This comes over a year after the company introduced its first three releases in the market back in early 2016. According to Organic Healthcare, the upcoming formulations will change the game in the market and give the competition a run for their money.

Organic Healthcare is owned by Thermalabs, one of the leading producers of cosmetics in the world. The firm (Organic Healthcare) was launched sometimes in 2015, as part of Thermalabs strategy to tap into the fast-growing market for organic health products. Organic Healthcare is headquartered in Galilee, Israel. The company uses a team of highly trained artisans to handmake its products without any use of chemicals or industrial processes. It has said that all its products are sourced from naturally-occurring herbs and seeds acquired from the mountains within the Galilee region.

In a move that can be seen as an escape from tradition, Organic Healthcare is looking backward when it comes to formulating its products. This is interesting given that most firms in the organic health space are relying on modern science and production technologies. But Priscilla Rodgers, the company's brand manager, has said that her firm is determined to tap into the better health, increased energy and vitality that human ancestors enjoyed. According to Ms. Rodgers, the only way to do that with a near 100% degree of efficiency is to look backward and unearth what human ancestors consumed to be so strong and healthy.

As part of its research, Organic Healthcare is relying on the works of the Rambam, a pre-eminent Jewish physician, and scholar who lived more than 1000 years ago. Today, dozens of prestigious healthcare facilities and educational institutions in Israel, the US and other countries have been named in tribute to the Rambam. The company is also looking at the works of other healthcare professionals who lived hundreds of years ago, but whose work has been recognized by modern scientists.

So far, Organic Healthcare has managed to furnish the market with three products, namely the Jerusalem Balsam Spray, Aragan Oil miracle serum, and the Anti Nail Fungus. All of these products are available on the market via Amazon.com.

"We are glad to announce that we are in the final steps to launching a new set of products as part of the Organic Healthcare brands. We've received a lot of enlightening, positive and negative reviews after our first launch, and have done the work it takes to capture the market by storm. The upcoming products will be truly phenomenal and have already been reviewed by top healthcare professionals. Stay tuned to Organic Healthcare for more soon....," said Ms. Rodgers.
