Recycled or reclaimed timber is often used by custom furniture designers at an industrial or commercial scale. Better Timber Flooring uses recycled and reclaimed wood from building joists and roofing trusses to manufacture flooring that is far superior to existing timber. The use of reclaimed and re-milled timber provides several environmental and structural benefits

The Better Timber Flooring process involves the transportation of wood from the Gladstone gas transmission pipeline project to its salvage yard where the wood is cleaned, nails and debris removed, graded, and cut. The award-winning company specializes in the use of reclaimed timber to manufacture engineered wood with a ply base, solid reclaimed wood flooring, or finger-jointed Australian hardwood.

According to a spokesperson for Better Timber Flooring, "We believe that the reclamation and re-purposing of fine Australian hardwoods are essential to improve our environmental responsibility while using these high-quality products in quality flooring. Our flooring is the product of years of research and innovation to deliver customizable premium quality products to our customers."

The spokesperson also confirmed rumours that recycled flooring materials supplied by Better Timber Flooring are close to being launched under a new eco-brand. The company focuses on reclaiming matured hardwood that would usually end up in landfills.

Better Timber Flooring is a timber flooring services company that supplies high-quality reclaimed timber and other flooring supplies. The company also operates a research and development facility and holds several international patents for its innovative flooring technologies. The firm is the recipient of the 2016 Australasian Timber Flooring Association Innovation Award for Excellence. More information is available at the URL above.
