FindAFixing Helps Both DIY and Professionals Find Details on Nuts and Bolts for Classic Car Restoration

Launched as a free online resource, FindaFixing aims to help classic car builders and restorers find details on nuts and bolts for for their project

May 7, 2020 (FPRC) -- Finding the right nuts and bolts for a classic car build or restoration is never easy. FindAFixing saves the daunting task of searching websites and forums to help find details on the right fastener or fixing for your project. As well as this, it is important to find a partner or platform that can help people connect to the right retailers and suppliers who have the right parts. FindAFixing is one such platform that has a directory of relevant retailers, wholesalers, specialist suppliers, owner clubs & forums and more. Born out of personal experience the founder went through while building and restoring a number of VW and Porsche classic cars, spending time visiting stores or looking online for the right fixing (nut, bolt, washer or screw) the idea for FindAFixing was born. A resource created so that those building or restoring a classic car can save time and frustration searching endlessly for one particular part and get the confidence of buying right first time. FindAFixing relies on 'the community' to help grow the site and welcome any information on fasteners and fixings that users can share with them through and easy to use interface. Covering hundreds of car models, dating back to the early 20th Century, they hope the information taken from their directory of parts helps maintain and keep classic cars alive for many years to come. Currently the site is at the beta stage and with constant updates to the directory improving information provided. More details can be found at https://www.findafixing.com
